Summary of Work

Your core responsibilities will include:

- Conducting autopsies
- Documenting findings
- Certifying causes of death
- Serving as a linchpin in criminal investigations and criminal proceedings
- Advising attorneys, law enforcement and county coroners in shaping policies and legislation to ensure fair and effective death investigations statewide

Your impact will stretch beyond individual cases. Through educational initiatives, you'll share expertise with law enforcement and other agencies, enhancing understanding and improving investigation quality. Administrative duties, such as serving on review panels, offer opportunities to contribute to preventing future tragedies and improving public safety.

Work Load

The State Forensic Examiner focuses on the western 32 counties, conducting between 200-250 autopsy cases per year. University of North Dakota's Department of Pathology serves the eastern counties. Because of North Dakota's notably low crime rate, the State Forensic Examiner will have ample opportunity to contribute to the public health aspect of death investigations.

Requirements

- American Board of Pathology Certification in anatomic pathology
- Certification or eligibility for certification in forensic pathology
- Eligibility for ND medical licensure
